COURSE INFO

Throughout the course, students will learn basic chords, notes, and rhythms, but most importantly, they will learn how to listen to music in a whole new way.

The classes are shaped around songs students know and get excited about. By linking concepts together each week, the rules and patterns of music are reinforced to show students how easy it can be to play their favorite songs, and even create their own.

Studies show that benefits of early music education include:

- Improved Memory
- Increased IQ
- Mental Processing
- Spatial Intelligence
- Individual Expression
- Language Development

About the Instructor:

I became fascinated with music from an early age, first learning guitar and ukulele, then percussion, and finally piano. I have over 10 years of experience teaching students from five to 65 years old. While some students were absolute beginners, others were attending top music schools or performing themselves.

I moved to the Seattle area in 2016 with my wife and two young children. I absolutely love it here and want to do my part in contributing to the enrichment of this wonderful community. Please feel free to reach out to me any time at ukeafterschool@gmail.com.
